FYI - start at the bottom. I didn't include everyone on my reply to Harvey

Hi Stephanie,

I get what they're dealing with and have spoken to Marty, Eric, Janine, John Wieber and Josh K at different points, and totally sympathetic to everyone. We're doing everything we can to support them, my comment about taking advantage of the ER Subgroup was just to seed hotwash discussions after this one calms down. Also an opportunity to work that ASPECT data workflow and publishing issue once again. I think we need to just agree on what the coordination protocols are going to be for complex, high profile or large geographic area responses. The ER Subgroup process really dates back to Katrina and probably high time to revisit how we do things.

OEM hasn't shown much skin in the game here - they just point every question to Josh Krochmal.

And of course, any time you and Joe aren't orchestrating things go to hell. Probably a good thing long term though in that we need to be less dependent on individuals.

Hi Harvey-

I know it's not really an excuse, but they are all a little out of their minds at this point. I'm getting texts that don't make any sense and seem to be just a random series of words but they all understand so I'm guessing they are speaking some type of sleep deprivation/stress induced language?? Grace did offer help earlier in the week but they said they were fine. I'm sure they probably don't even remember this now. But thanks for your help!

I have to point out that you guys haven't taken advantage of the ER GIS Subgroup. No calls to Scott or Grace requesting daily calls, and those calls would have been very helpful.

Coward. I can't tell you how angry I am. Tony, the only one who obviously had a clue as to how a response is really run, is gone. The ER GIS workgroup is dead.

We worked with eoc PIO and eoc GIS

The data is using our publicly posted information. It was reviewed; we limited some of the data to avoid confusion per Jennifer's consult with the folks here.

Hey Danny - Not sure if EOC approved or if you consulted with the region.

Just spoke with Melissa and she said the region has a much more accurate and detailed map that it is ready to be posted, and likely would want to replace with what just went up.

Daniel Burgo in the region will be sending it shortly. It has been approved by the Area Commander and JIC.

He will follow up with Jeff Morin and Danny .

Hey everyone,

We worked with our friends in GIS to get a public-facing version of the map. This pulls from the approved, QA/QC'd public data we've already posted. It's a visual tool to help users look at our data in a meaningful way. We've added it to the top of our newly published data page that has all the data listed in reverse chrono order.
